WISDOM FROM THE LITERATURE

STEP 3

"It is when we try to make our will conform with God's that we begin to use it rightly. To all of us, this was a most wonderful revelation. Our whole trouble had been the misuse of willpower. We had tried to bombard our problems with it instead of attempting to bring it into agreement with God's intention for us. To make this increasingly possible is the purpose of A.A.'s Twelve Steps, and Step Three opens the door." (12 and 12, p. 40)

STEP 4

"It is plain that a life which includes deep resentment leads only to futility and unhappiness. To the precise extent that we permit these, do we squander the hours that might have been worth while. But with the alcoholic, whose hope is the maintenance and growth of a spiritual experience, this business of resentment is infinitely grave. We found that it is fatal. For when harboring such feelings we shut ourselves off from the sunlight of the Spirit." (AA, p. 66)

When It's Not "Their" Fault!

The first time I worked Step 4, it was painful and felt like I was pulling out fingernails. Thanks to an amazing sponsor I completed that arduous process and thought to myself, "Whew, that's over and I won't have to do that ever again!" Goodness, that has not been not the case because there are still people who can cause my resentments to pop right to the surface. So, what do I do when that happens now?

When my anger and resentment come to the surface, my first inclination is to blame the other person. After all, they have "done me wrong" in some way—at least in my opinion. I take several deep breaths to connect with my Higher Power and remember that my feelings are real yet they don't have to rule me. The next step is to take out pen and paper and begin a "mini" fourth step inventory.

Writing the name of the person I'm angry with initially brings up all the old feelings; I see this as part of the healing process. Of course the next column is what the person has done to offend, anger, or cause resentment. Looking next at what part of me has been affected, it occurs to me that it's not my grown up self that's impacted. Rather it is my little kid who is feeling fear, who is not being heard, whose ego is threatened, and so many other things. Looking back at my original fourth step and subsequent "mini" fourth steps, patterns begins to emerge showing me that it's the same
